

It's that rainy time of year again... a beautiful time of the year in Zambia if you are looking to visit, but a logistical nightmare if you are trying to get anywhere on dirt roads. And more precisely, the dirt roads in and around the Lower Zambezi. Last year we got our Hilux well and truly stuck; this year it was Alex proving that her 4x4 driving skills aren't up to much when it comes to navigating the Lower Zambezi's bush roads...(there IS a car there somewhere!).

In spite of the rains, we are busy with building work at camp, as you can see. Last year it was paths and walkways, this year a major re-thatching exercise for Hippo Pod and our library and a few new decks to make the most of the views out over the Zambezi.

I know you are being bombarded with special deals at the moment but I wanted to send a reminder of a couple of the low season deals we are running this year. Please feel free to contact me if you have any queries.
